About This Game

On a road trip for Halloween, your car breaks down on the side of the road. A strange set of circumstances follows, as a young child appears screaming for your help and then disappears into the corn fields. Now that you've been stranded here in the middle of nowhere, you must wander into the cornfields to save this child - whoever she is. You will encounter many challenges along the way that may surprise and frighten you. This game is specifically built for VR and contains realistic graphics that will immerse you in the environment. Pitchfork is both terrifying and enjoyable, with a story line that will keep you guessing.

This game is really fun and interesting. The dev did a good job of making the corn maze and building an environment that draws you in. I'm interested to see what comes in the next chapter, but I'm good with playing this a few more times. Good game, good job!. did not enjoy one bit controls are clunky you have to look which ever way you want to walk which is really annoying especially when your sig zagging through a corn field. way over priced. thank god for steam refunds!. Just to be honest I am a friend of the developers. I went to his launch party and I have to say this game is very imersive. It relies on the world for build fear and not just jump scares. This was my first time in VR so I also played a bunch of other games durring this party and this game has a game feel to it and not a demo or a wave shooter. This game had everyone jumping and scared. This is a very unique game from what i have tried. Also from this party i am going to have to buy a VIVE.. did not enjoy one bit controls are clunky you have to look which ever way you want to walk which is really annoying especially when your sig zagging through a corn field. way over priced. thank god for steam refunds!. Halloween is my fave, so I figured I would purchase this game. I must say it gave me goose bumps and the dev did a great job with the element of sunrises with the story. The updates the dev did on the games, made it more user friendly. I definitely recommend this game to anyone who loves to be scared.
